C., Aug. 24—Special to Telegraph—The alleged plan to kill Representative Johnson of Kentucky, chairman of the house committee on District of Columbia, so as to head off certain legislation, has been disclosed. Johnson refuses to comment and declares he knows about it and will be on his guard. The assassin's scheme was betrayed by a man who talked on a car.

The "certain legislation" concerns the saloon problem for the city of Washington.

ROSENTHAL HEARS FROM PRESIDENT

TAFT SORRY HE CAN'T COME TO BARBECUE—WISHES ALL HAPPY OUTING.

The following letter received by Eli Rosenthal, chairman of the barbecue committee of the Elks, is self-explanatory, and while it brought some disappointment, the committee feels that it is a good advertisement for the affair to be held Labor day. The letter is:

My Dear Sir: As the President will not be able to attend the barbecue to be given by the Elks at Watson's island on Labor day, I beg to return to you, as requested, the ticket which accompanied your letter of the 17th instant.

Thanking you in the President's behalf for your courtesy and conveying his best wishes for a successful and happy outing, I am,

Yours very truly,
C. A. THOMPSON,
Secretary to the President.

C. F. BAKER GETS TO END OF ROPE

ARRESTED IN SPRINGFIELD ON CHARGE OF STEALING AND FORGERY.

Amboy News: Charles F. Baker, the former Amboy boy who came to town on an evening train July 15th and made quite a splurge on the following day and wound up by trying to get a check for $300 cashed at the First National bank, is finally in the toils of the law. Just one month after his little escapade in Amboy he was arrested in Springfield charged with forgery and robbery.

The News is indebted to Norman F. Reinboth of Springfield for a copy of the Illinois State Register which contains the following account of young Baker's last effort that has come to light thus far and which resulted in his arrest:

"Although Charles Vivian Baker, who claims to be a marine nurse from the marine hospital in Chicago, faced a charge of stealing a watch and $75 in money and obtaining $20 on a forged telegram from Orville D. Stewart, a lawyer of Chicago, in this city, he came back here from San Francisco yesterday. He was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Wilbur F. Morris, while sitting in the probate court room waiting for a friend.

"Mr. Stewart met Baker at a hotel in this city, where both were staying while here on business. Stewart became ill and hired Baker to nurse him. He says that he gave Baker a telegram for money to send to his firm in Chicago and that Baker took the money, some money which he had in his possession, and skipped out. He also took a watch belonging to Stewart.

"The sheriff's office traced Baker to Kansas City and then to San Francisco. The San Francisco officials telegraphed here that Baker had started back east. Deputy Morris knew that Baker had friends here and was on the lookout for him. He recognized him in the probate court yesterday."

SANDERS NOT YET VISITED BY FATHER

BUT MURDERER EXPRESSES CONFIDENCE HIS PARENT WILL COME.

HE IS DETERMINED TO FIGHT

Believes When Jury Hears His Story They Will Take Lenient View of the Murder.

Although he has been disappointed twice by the non-arrival of his father, Cornelius Sanders, Warren Sanders, in his cell at the Lee county jail today expressed confidence that his parents will come to his aid, even though they are somewhat tardy in arriving.

Sanders states that he realizes the seriousness of the crime for which he will be tried, and he expresses a willingness to take his punishment, but he is determined to fight the case providing any of his relatives will furnish the necessary finances.

He believes that when a jury has heard his side of the story and has learned the things he alleges, it will take a lenient view of the double murder, and give him a light sentence.

FOR WALLACE AND HAGGENBACK BIG SHOWS COMING SEPTEMBER 20.

The committee working to make arrangements for the appearance of the Wallace & Haggenback shows here Friday, Sept. 20, is encountering a little difficulty in securing suitable grounds. They have wired the management of the circus asking additional time to attend to this feature and will continue their efforts to complete satisfactory arrangements. They are particularly desirous of securing the show for Dixon as Ringling Brothers announced at Sterling Thursday that they would return to that city later in the season.

WHITESIDE MOOSES DIVIDE THE HERD

SPLIT IN THE RANKS OF THE NEW PARTY IN NEARBY COUNTY.

COUNTY AND LEGISLATIVE TICKETS THE CAUSE

J. T. Williams, Progressive Leader, Wants to Back Primary Nominees.

Sterling Standard: The selection of a county and legislative ticket threatens to split the ranks of the Bull Moose party in Whiteside county and in the last 24 hours there has arisen a condition that is serious.

In Chicago the state leaders insist that the complete county tickets be named in each county in the state and in each congressional district, so that candidates for representatives be named.

J. T. Williams refused to endorse any such action in this district basing his refusal on the grounds that the progressives in their county convention had endorsed the ticket already in the field for representatives and county officers and he does not think it wise to go behind this action in any way.

This action on the part of Williams will cost him the nomination for congressman at large on the Bull Moose ticket and he explains his attitude in a letter sent out this morning to various Bull Moose workers in the county.

The state leaders want Williams to run for the office of member of the state board of equalization in the district but it is not at all likely that he will consider a proposition of this kind.

The refusal of leaders of the movement in this county to countenance third county or legislative tickets, has caused the state leaders to select a Lee county man to invade the county and arrange for naming a ticket, but it is not likely this gentleman will meet with much favorable support for a county ticket.

Leaders of all parties agree that the action of the progressives in desiring to foist a third ticket for everything is going to injure the ticket in the county.

The progressives in the east end of the senatorial district have an axe to grind with Hon. A. N. Abbott and it is this that makes them so insistent upon a third ticket for representatives being placed in the field.

In the matter of a county ticket, the real cause for naming candidates for the county office is not evident, as the candidates on the ticket were at heart all progressives from the start and in many instances have signified their intention of supporting Roosevelt.

FAIR HAVEN FARMER DROPS DEAD

EXPIRES WHILE TAKING STRAW AWAY FROM THRESHING MACHINE.

Sterling, Aug. 24—John D. Wichert of Fair Haven dropped dead on Thursday afternoon while working in his barn taking care of the straw from a threshing machine. Mr. Wichert was in the best of health, but it is believed that tramping around on the straw affected his heart action. Several men were in the barn with Mr. Wichert when suddenly he fell backwards and when his companions arrived at his side he was dead.

U. S. SOLDIERS PASS THRU HERE

UNCLE SAM'S SIGNAL CORPS BOYS ARE ENROUTE TO CALIFORNIA.

A train load of soldiers, horses and wagons passed through Dixon on the Chicago & Northwestern on their way from Chicago to California. The train was marked U. S. Signal Corps. As the train passed through one of the soldiers dropped a card from the window on which was written "J. P. Fleming, U. S. Signal Corps, Omaha, Neb. Write to me." which proves that romantic soldiers are not a matter of fiction alone.

COLORED CITIZEN WHIPS RUBENSTEIN

AND IS BROUGHT BEFORE JUSTICE HANNAKEN AND DISMISSED.

SAM PROVEN THE AGRESSOR

The Unpleasant Mixup Has Placed Sam Where He Is In Doubt, Politically.

Wm. Gedson, colored, was arrested last evening on a warrant sworn out by Sam Rubenstein, charging assault and battery and divers other crimes against the majesty of the law, and the aforesaid complaining witness, Sam Rubenstein. Mr. Rubenstein alleged that on or about yesterday afternoon or evening the defendant Gedson did, or caused to be did, assault and beat said complaining witness, thereby causing him great bodily anxiety, which bodily anxiety did cause Rubenstein to involuntarily but effectively to break at the last one of the commandments.

Justice Hannaken heard the case and after examining the witness decided that Rubenstein had been the aggressor, that he had no business to cause one of the hiring to jump on Mr. Gedson with a heavy iron bar and trying to break said heavy iron bar over Mr. Gedson's (colored) head. He promptly dismissed the defendant, and now Rubenstein don't know whether to vote for Roosevelt or not.

PALMYRA FARMER IN RUNAWAY

ALBION SEAVEY HAS HEAD CUT AND LEFT COLLAR BONE FRACTURED.

Albion Seavey, a prominent farmer of Palmyra, while coming to Dixon this afternoon, was thrown from his vehicle onto the Galena avenue bridge and sustained a bad cut on the head and had his left collar bone fractured. Mr. Seavey was taken to the office of Dr. Parker. His horse frightened at a delivery wagon and turned suddenly to one side, cramping the buggy and throwing Mr. Seavey to the floor of the bridge.

The horse ran away but was caught before it had gone far and taken to Manges' feed sheds.

GANNONS PARK PLAN TAKES

BUSINESS MEN APPROVE OF THE SCHEME—PROMISE TO ISSUE BONDS.

Commissioner M. J. Gannon stated this morning that the publication of his scheme to purchase the Dixon College campus and transform it into a city park, is meeting with the approval of all classes, and he is of the opinion that no trouble whatever will be encountered in engineering the deal. Mr. Gannon proposes to issue park bonds for the purchase and rehabilitation of the grounds, which bonds can be met with a nominal special taxation.

HEN HOUSE AND BARN BURN

FIRE AT THE WILL SLOTHOWER HOME DOES CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE.

A barn and chicken house at the corner of Douglas avenue and Third street, owned by Will Slothower, were destroyed by fire at 2:30 this afternoon, the fire originating in the haymow. It is thought that boys playing with matches caused the fire, which threatened the house. A survey, runabout, harness, several tons of hay and considerable feed were destroyed. Mr. Slothower was unable to estimate the loss, but stated that he is insured.

BUD MARS MAKES SUCCESSFUL FLIGHT

AT DEKALB PICNIC THURSDAY—HOWEVER, ENGINE DID NOT WORK WELL.

Bud Mars, aviator, made a successful flight at the Knights of Columbus picnic at DeKalb Thursday. His flight was witnessed by thousands of people.

Bud was in Dixon once upon a time, but he didn't fly. His engine was bad. The same engine didn't work very well at DeKalb and for that reason he had to come back to earth sooner than he intended. Mrs. Mars was with her husband at DeKalb and she was nervous all the time Bud was up in the air.

Bud wanted to make a second trip into the air, but because the engine was refusing to work well the management of the picnic refused to let the aviator make the second trip. Mrs. Mars was happy. So was Bud. However, Bud Mars is a nervy fellow.

SUNDAY'S GAME PROMISES EXCITEMENT

CAN DIXON STARS DEFEAT TEAM THAT PULLED 7 TO 5 SCORE FROM BROWNS?

Tomorrow afternoon's game between the Dixon Stars and the Forrester Independents promises to be one of exceptional interest inasmuch as it will give a little dope on the respective strength of the Stars and Browns. The Browns were defeated by the Forrester team by a score of 7 to 0. What will the Stars be able to do with the gang that pulled that score off the Browns? That question is uppermost in the minds of the fans and accordingly they will be out in force to see the fun.

Ladies will be admitted free, as usual, and the game will be called at 2:45 o'clock sharp, to allow the visitors to catch the northbound train. Huber and Keenan will work for the Stars, and the regular lineup will play.

RUNAWAY ON DEPT AVENUE

TEAM DRAWING DIXON INN BUS FRIGHTENS AT TRAIN AND DASHES DOWN STREET

Depot avenue was enlivened last evening by a mad runaway, which, fortunately, resulted in no harm. The team drawing the Dixon Inn bus pulled a new stunt when, while standing at the depot, they became frightened at the Sterling passenger and turning dashed madly down the avenue. In vain they tried to negotiate the turn at Fifth street, and crashed into an iron hitching post, which threw them both to the ground. They were caught before they could get up and examination showed that the post was the only recipient of damage. It was twisted off at the sidewalk line.

"YOUNG OUTLAWS" KILL TURKS

GEO. W. FROST AT LEE CENTER TOWNSHIP WAS LOSER OF THANKSGIVING FOOD

Amboy News: George W. Frost, who lives on the old Brewer farm southeast of Lee Center, complains of having recently had fifteen young turkeys and an old one killed and three crippled by a band of young outlaws who have been in the habit of hunting in that neighborhood. He says he has good evidence as to who the parties are that have been doing this nefarious work but has not decided what steps he will take, as he dislikes to involve the good name of the families of the culprits in the matter. It would be a wise move for those interested to "come across" shortly.

DRENNER WANTS TO OPEN SALOON

FILES APPLICATION WITH CITY CLERK GROVER—LOCATION IN ASCHENBRENNER BUILDING.

Phil W. Drenner has filed with City Clerk Blake Grove an application for a license to conduct a dram shop in the new Aschenbrenner building on First street when it is completed. The presentation of the license to the council will doubtless precipitate a warm argument, as several of the commissioners have committed themselves to the policy of "no more saloons."

KREITER FARM BRINGS $14,500

The deal was negotiated by Sidney Lazarus, the hustling real estate man of Compton. Mr. Lazarus has made a large number of important sales in this county during the past few weeks.

While Rev. and Mrs. S. Mr. Fisher assured them he would attend to their wants as soon as he could get home.

Mr. and Mrs. Fisher hurried home, not even taking time to ride on the street car. When they arrived and entered the house they found instead of a couple, more than 100 of the members and friends of the Christian church had assembled and gained entrance to their home and were awaiting their arrival.

Mr. Fisher confessed that he had fallen a victim for the first time to such a surprise. After the guests had enjoyed themselves for a time Dr. Kost, in a few well chosen words, presented Rev. and Mrs. Fisher with a handsome set of dishes. Ice cream of such good quality as only Ben Snyder can make and cake sufficient to feed a multitude was served to all present.

The guests then departed wishing their beloved pastor and family abundant success in his work in Dixon.

For two and a half years Rev. Fisher has been the able and efficient pastor of the Christian church in Dixon. During this time he has won the hearts of the people both in and out of the church by his able presentation and defense of gospel truth and his denunciation of such conditions as tend to lower the standard of morality in a community. His able addresses on special occasions and his readiness to serve wherever his services might be beneficial to any, together with the congenial spirit of him and his family has created a desire of the people of Dixon for a long period of service among us.

DEMENTTOWN

It is evident from some of the big Bull Moose's replies that everybody who doesn't agree with him is a liar. One would almost believe that he is the only clean man in politics.

And the campaign has just begun. Before it's over every man who is running for office will have his history repeated in detail from the cradle to his candidacy.

Whereupon let's rejoice that we're not seeking to become a servant of the people.

To digress, let us remark that Judge Farrand has some exclusive information on Amboy's superior features which he will gladly impart to all inquirers.

Mexico City, Aug. 22.—Special — President Madero is going to resign tomorrow. He has said so himself.

The president is in feeble health. He ate three pounds of beefsteak for breakfast and walked 18 miles for a short constitutional before luncheon. It is rumored here that the president is going to die. He probably will. Most people do.

HANDS ITCHED AND BURNED

So Sore Could Not Close Them. Started With Rash. Just Terrible. Broke Into Sores. Could Not Sleep. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured Him Entirely.

Abbotsford, Wis.—"My son had eczema on his hands for about one year. The eczema started with a rash. His hands were sore so he could not close them, and when he wet his hands they hurt him so he could hardly wash. His hands itched and burned just terrible and if he would scratch them, they would break out into sores. He could not get any rest or sleep, and his hands looked quite bad."

"We had medicine and salve and it kept getting worse all the time. I got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after washing his hands with the Cuticura Soap and putting some of the Cuticura Ointment on two times a day and tying cloths on them for about six months they got well and have not broken out since. Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured him entirely."

(Signed) Mrs. Laurence Kiehl, Feb. 13, 1912. Not only are Cuticura Soap and Ointment most valuable in the treatment of eczema and other distressing eruptions of skin and scalp, but no other emollients do so much for pimples, blackheads, red, rough and oily skins, itching, scaly scalps, dry, thin and falling hair, chapped hands and shapeless nails, nor do it so economically. Sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston." As Tender-faced men should use Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick, 25c. COL. ROOSEVELT SAYS ARCHBOLD'S TESTIMONY FALSE

Declares Accusations are Base Calumnies of Cornelius N. Bliss.

OIL MAN TELLS OF $125,000

Testifies Before Senate Campaign Investigating Body of Standard Company's Contribution to 1904 Battle—Penrose Also Hit by Ex-President.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Colonel Roosevelt sat on the porch at Sagamore Hill and dictated a statement in reply to the testimony of John D. Archbold before the senate investigating committee.

He reiterated his declaration that he knew nothing of a contribution by Mr. Archbold or the Standard Oil company to the Republican campaign of 1904; declared that he did not "for one moment believe that Mr. Archbold's testimony is truthful"; charged Mr. Archbold with a "wicked assault on a dead man"; added that during many calls which Mr. Archbold made upon him while he was president to urge him not to prosecute the Standard Oil company, Mr. Archbold never referred to any contribution to his campaign fund, and concluded with the suggestion that the senate committee should make Mr. Archbold and Senator Penrose testify at once concerning their relations while Mr. Penrose was a member of the industrial commission.

In his last word Colonel Roosevelt thanked both Messrs. Archbold and Penrose for "making it clear beyond possibility of doubt that I am the man the Penroses and Archbolds of the country most dread in public life."

Archbold Tells of $125,000 Gift.

Washington, Aug. 24.—John D. Archbold, considered the political manager and directing genius of the Standard Oil company, told the senate committee investigating campaign funds that the Standard Oil company's $125,000 contribution to the Republican war chest of 1904 was made upon assurances from Cornelius N. Bliss that "the contribution was acceptable to Colonel Roosevelt and that further contributions would be acceptable."

"I told Mr. Bliss we did not want to make the contribution unless it was to be gratefully received," he said. "Mr. Bliss told us of Mr. Roosevelt's attitude toward business and said he believed Mr. Roosevelt would be a fair and conservative man when it came to the test. Mr. Bliss urged that the policies of the Republican party were the safest for business. We felt that our interests as a business organization lay on the Republican side and we decided to make this contribution."

Due Warning From Bliss.

Later, when Mr. Bliss asked the Standard Oil for more money—about $150,000—Mr. Archbold said the board of directors refused to contribute. He quoted Mr. Bliss as saying:

"I speak to you personally. I think you had better make this contribution. If you don't somebody else will."

When the bureau of corporations began making adverse reports on the Standard Oil company, Mr. Archbold said, Mr. Bliss admitted that the government's attacks were unjust, but said he had no influence with Mr. Roosevelt.

When the Standard Oil magnate was asked if he thought the company's refusal to contribute further was the cause of the "unjust" government attack, he bit his lips and said: "Well, I don't know."

Consider Summoning Roosevelt.

When Mr. Archbold finished his testimony several members of the committee conferred on the advisability of inviting Colonel Roosevelt to testify. Mr. Penrose wishes the committee to subpoena the colonel. Mr. Archbold's testimony was regarded of such importance that it was decided to call William Rockefeller, if his health will permit, and to recall George B. Cortelyou, Republican national chairman in 1904, who appeared before the committee July 11 and could not recall that any contributions from corporations were used in the Roosevelt campaign. Mr. Cortelyou also testified at that time that he had never heard of a contribution by Mr. Archbold or anyone "on his behalf."

Penrose Gives His Testimony.

Senator Penrose was a witness before the committee following Archbold. He introduced into the record the statement regarding the $25,000 contribution to the Pennsylvania campaign fund of 1904 by Archbold and the contribution of $100,000 to the national campaign fund, which he had previously made in the senate. He said he had practically nothing to add to that, but would answer any questions.

Senator Penrose's testimony was brief. At its conclusion the committee adjourned and it was announced that George W. Perkins of New York would appear next Tuesday.

Chairman Clapp was in communication with New York city over the long distance telephone and it was said he had been discussing with some one there the probability of Colonel Roosevelt appearing. The nature of his conversation could not be learned.

Hot One for Senator Penrose. New York, Aug. 24.—Colonel Roosevelt

here declared that "Senator Penrose's statement that George W. Perkins underwrote my primary expenses for $3,000,000, or any sum even remotely resembling it, is a deliberate and wilful falsehood, which he knows to be such, when he makes it."

"Mr. Penrose," he added, "would do well not to attribute to others the infinite baseness which actuates himself."

Colonel Roosevelt dictated the foregoing. "The statement that the letters and telegrams to Mr. Cortelyou," the statement continues, "were written for the purpose of going into the record and were not genuine and were not accepted by Mr. Cortelyou as genuine, is a deliberate and wilful falsehood and Senator Penrose knows it to be such when he makes it."

Two Letters and a Telegram. "My first letter, written as soon as I heard a rumor that the Standard Oil people had contributed, and explicit and unequivocal in its terms, was written on October 26; my second letter, if possible even more emphatic, October 27. Not hearing from the letters, I wired October 29. I then received from Mr. Cortelyou a statement that my wishes would be complied with and that no contribution from the Standard Oil people had been or would be received."

"If any such contribution was received it was not only without my knowledge but against my explicit direction. These letters speak for themselves. They went into the records, of course, but they went into the records because they were genuine and bore on their face the proof that they were genuine, and because I received the assurance that they were accepted in the spirit in which I wrote them."

"The reason that Mr. Penrose and his political allies and his backers and masters in the world of finance are against me now is because they and their kind could not use me while I was president."

"I count myself honored by his opposition and I count that opposition as a certificate of character for the Progressive party, for it shows that the Progressive party, and only the Progressive party and the leaders of the Progressive party, are the foes really dreaded by the Penroses in our public life."

Says Knox Story is False.

Colonel Roosevelt was asked specifically about a story which set forth that Philander C. Knox, now secretary of state, had entered his office when he was signing one of the Cortelyou letters and had informed him that his instructions to Mr. Cortelyou were useless, as the Standard Oil money had already been spent. The story went on to say that Colonel Roosevelt remarked that his letters "should go into the record."

"That is another absolute and wilful falsehood," said the colonel.

VANDERBILT BALL ELEGANT

Fancy Dress Function Most Extravagant Affair of Newport Society.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 24.—The fancy dress ball which Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt gave at their splendid residence, Beaulieu, will go down in history as the most extravagant affair of its kind ever seen in Newport. Its whole tone and color was of the effete east; distinctly oriental. The dance cost $75,000. They estimate, too, that the women whose grace and beauty adorned the occasion wore $100,000 worth of jewels.

WOMEN JURORS

States Attorney Wayman says a miscarriage of justice was done in the acquittal of Mrs. Bernstein, who was accused of shooting her husband twice in the back while he lay asleep. The state's attorney claims that the spirit of chivalry men feel toward the fair sex prevents their giving a verdict which the law and the evidence would require. He now looks forward to the placing of women on juries. He believes they would be less swayed by sentiment in such cases, and women criminals would be tried on their merits.

It is difficult to see just how this would be a panacea, however, for a larger portion of the criminals who are brought to trial, are males. If sex considerations supplant those of sex, would not many male criminals be set free by women?

STANDS BY PRIMARY

State Journal: Senator Jonathan Bourne is a progressive from the state of Oregon. In the recent primary election in that state, he was defeated for renomination, but it is charged that the election was unfairly conducted, and friends are urging him to become an independent candidate.

Mass conventions for putting Bourne in nomination already have been held; he has been given every assurance that he can be elected, but the Oregon senator is not impressed with this movement in his behalf. His progressiveness does not partake of the character of the so-called Illinois progressives who are concerned with the spite ticket movement in this state. He believes in standing by the primaries and he has so written his Oregon friends. He says:

"Unless it can be conclusively shown that the nomination of Mr. Selling was accomplished by fraud, or by such extravagant use of money by his friends as to amount to a violation of the corrupt practices act, I shall abide by the verdict of the primaries. If they made a mistake, that is their lookout. It is much more important that the primary law be upheld than it is that I or any other man be elected to the senate."

Contrast this declaration with the conduct of Illinois men who, without casting a suspicion upon the honesty or fairness of the Illinois primary, are now trying to defeat its nominees with candidates chosen by a handful of disappointed Chicago politicians. Contrast Bourne's ringing defense of the primary with the contemptible excuse which is offered for the attack upon it in Illinois!

MRS. LAFOLLETTE'S DISENT

Mrs. LaFollette is out in an attack on the woman suffrage position of Roosevelt, which is taken to mean that Roosevelt cannot make himself acceptable to the LaFollettes, even when warring for progressivism and the suffrage. Possibly Roosevelt did not say all that was in his mind in upholding the suffrage cause, but he favored it for one thing because it would broaden the world for women. This opens the way for Mrs. LaFollette's attack, in which she calls on the world to understand that some questions would be immediately placed on a different plane if the electorate were enlarged to include the view point of women. She specifies:

"Working women have the same need to combine for protection as working men have. The ballot is as necessary for one as for the other. We do not believe that with two sexes there is identity of function. We do believe there would be equality of right if women could vote. It would strengthen the hands of the endeavoring to deal in an efficient fashion with such evils as the white slave traffic, and the widespread publication of names of owners and landlords of houses used for immoral purposes."

In the explanations which appeal to the LaFollette family for not upholding the cause of the progressives and the cause of suffrage by supporting Roosevelt it is suspected that the real reason has not yet come out, in any public way at least.

who gather then usually and who have been investigating this year's harvest. Hickory nuts, it is said, in proportion to the number of trees, are to bear the scarcest of the four kinds of nuts common in this section. Hazelnuts and butternuts are scarce every season, owing to the limited number of bushes and trees. Though there are not many walnut trees, they yield bounteously almost every year. Last year there was a bumper harvest of them and this year the trees are fairly well loaded. What hickory nuts there are, are wormy, and many of them are already dropping from the trees. This is especially true of the younger trees. As a general rule there is a bountiful harvest of nuts every second year: Last year's harvest was a heavy one and this year's light one is not to be wondered at.

TREASURER MEDICAL SOCIETY ASKS FUNDS

DR. J. A. MARKLEY OF BELVIDERE MAKES DEMAND.

AMOUNT INVOLVED IS $15,000

Demand Has Been Made on Chairman of Board of Council of Illinois State Medical Society.

Doctors throughout the state who are members of the Illinois State Medical society are watching the outcome of the demand that has been made against the board of council for turning over the funds of the society to Dr. J. A. Markley of Belvidere, who was elected treasurer at the state convention held at Springfield in May. The board will be asked to show cause why the fund has not been placed in the hands of the new treasurer, and unless it is soon forthcoming, it is said court action will be taken.

Fund Amounts to $15,000.

It is understood that Dr. Markley's predecessor, Dr. Everett J. Brown of Decatur, was ready to turn over the fund, which amounts to about $15,000, but the transfer is said to have been held up by the state council.

Dr. Markley has now made a demand on Carl E. Black of Jacksonville, chairman of the board of council, for the fund. This is said to have been a notice that Dr. Black must act or he will be cited to appear in court to show why the funds are not forthcoming.

Insurgents vs. Standpatters.

The long time that has elapsed since election and the funds not having been transferred is said to be some of the members to inquire into the delay. They see it is an outbreak between two factions of the society, the insurgents and the standpatters. The insurgents carried off many of the positions at the state convention, including the election of Dr. Mark-ley, to the chagrin, it is said, of the standpatters, and those who were in office are believed to be holding off giving control simply to annoy the insurgents.

The Springfield convention was an interesting session, but it is said that the next annual meeting to be held at Peoria will be filled with many thrills. Five thousand physicians are members of the state society at present.

THE BRIGHTER OUTLOOK.

Now that the price of meat has gone a-soaring once more, with but the faintest prospect that at an early date it will come down, it is at least pleasant to recall that there are some bright spots on the comestible horizon. For the current year the high cost of living has been not merely because there is a scarcity of meats but in a large degree because there has also been a shortage of vegetable products and of grain. But for the year 1912 the crop prospects are most flattering and satisfactory, and lower prices for grain may eventually result in reduction of the price of meats.

The August bulletin of the United States department of agriculture, which was issued last Saturday, contains many facts and figures of most consoling nature. Compared with the year 1911 or with a ten-year average practically every grain in the country shows a condition much above the normal, the sole exception being of winter wheat, which was injuriously affected by the unfavorable conditions of the autumn of a year ago. Reckoned on a minimum of one hundred points, the average condition of spring wheat on Aug. 1 was 90.4 per cent, 59.8 per cent in 1911 and 80.3 for a ten year average. On this basis the spring wheat crop of the country should be a half greater than it was last year. Corn this year stands at 80.0 against 69.6 in 1911; oats at 90.3 against 59.8 a year ago; barley at 89.1 against 66.2; buckwheat at 88.4 against 82.9; potatoes 87.8 against 62.3, and 84.8 for the ten-year average; hay at 91.0 against 64.6, and apples at 65.8 as against 53.9.

Put into figures of bushels and tons, the above estimates are almost staggering. They will mean that the United States will produce 2,811,000,000 bushels of corn, 390,000,000 bushels of winter wheat, 290,000,000 bushels of spring wheat, 1,207,000,000 bushels of oats, and 202,000,000 bushels of barley, 35,000,000 bushels of rye, 16,000,000 bushels of buckwheat and 23,000,000 bushels of rice; while for good measure there are 980,000,000 bushels of potatoes and 73,000,000 tons of hay. Equally divided among the people of the country, this would provide 55 bushels of grain to each person and 10 1/2 bushels of potatoes to each individual.

With figures such as these for early August and with every prospect that the outlook will improve, as it has since July 1, we should possess our souls with patience, looking forward hopefully to the lower prices which with the bumper crops of the year 1912 should certainly prevail.

REMAINS TRUE TO INSTINCT

True It Is That a Sheep May Become a Wolf, but Never a Wolf Becomes Sheep.

One Sunday at the house of Anatole France, they were talking of the admirable romance he had just published, "The Gods are Thirsty." M. Paul Souday expressed in the warmest terms the enthusiasm with which this work had inspired him. Above all he vaunted the character of "Evariste Gamelin," whom a false revolutionary philanthropy had transformed from a bleating sheep to a devouring wolf.

A Russian lady, who was present, said she knew of wolves that had become sheep. "The Prince Troubetzkoi," she said, "has two of them. He brought them from Russia. They had been tamed and he led them in a leash like greyhounds. You know that he is a vegetarian. He has imposed this diet upon his beasts. He feeds them vegetables and salads."

"In fact," then said Anatole France. "I met him the other day with his wolves of which you speak, in the street. He had stopped before a fruit stand and he was plundering a basket of carrots to regale his beasts."

"That is an excellent example for vegetarians," said the lady. "Seduced by such an example, I acquired a wolf and fed him myself. But I feared that he would fade away. But as I did not intend to renounce my vegetarian ideas I continued to make him nibble fruits and roots in public while at home, secretly I gave him fresh meat. In this way I was able to keep him for some time. He died a while ago. I do not understand how Prince Troubetzkoi succeeds in keeping his wolves. I suspect he employs the same method as myself."

In short," said Anatole France, "one often finds sheep that become wolves, but never wolves that become sheep."

FAMILY THEATRE

The Family theatre will reopen with high class vaudeville on Monday, August 26th and Manager Michelstetter, who has recently returned from a business trip to Chicago, where he consulted his booking agents, claims that he has made a very careful selection of acts for the entertainment of the many patrons of his cozy Family theatre, and nothing will appear in the house but the most carefully censored features during his regime as manager of same.

For the first half of the week the program will include the Famous Mabelle Fonda Troupe, a scenic juggling novelty. As an extra attraction, the Richmond Trio of Harmony Singers of unusual excellence. Both of these acts come direct from the leading vaudeville houses in the metropolitan cities and will be seen for the first time during their engagement at the Family.

Commencing Friday, August 29th, another bill of excellence has been selected, including the Four Bruns Sisters, in a refined instrumental and singing novelty. Schulte & Keene in a singing and talking specialty of exceptional merit.

Manager Michelstetter has completely renovated his theatre after the summer season of pictures and is pleased to guarantee his patrons the same courteous treatment in the future that they have received in the past.

OSTEOPATHY

Osteopathy is not understood by many people. It is reasonable and scientific. I do not claim to cure every case of every disease. No method of healing ever has, but Osteopathy cures many diseases that other methods have failed on and has cured and will cure most diseases where one Osteopath fails probably another can cure the case. Why drag out a weary, painful or nervous existence when you can be relieved? Osteopathy will probably cure you. Don't let prejudice stand in your way. I do not give rough treatment.

Osteopathy Cures

Women's diseases, nervous diseases, bad circulation, pains throughout the body, melancholia, insomnia, neurasthenia, neuralgia, anemia, lumbago, rheumatism, asthma, bronchitis, colds, goitre, diarrhoea, constipation, bed wetting, St. Vitus dance, discolorations, grippe, headache, hysteria, indigestion, neuritis, cramps, dyspepsia, spinal curvatures, pains in back, impotence, piles, some cases of paralysis, tumors, diabetes, gall stones, diseases of head, throat, heart, lungs, stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys, bladder and many which can not be enumerated here. Kilts Are Coming.

The slide plaits that have been so cleverly introduced into the skirts this summer are merely advance agents of the kilted skirt that is coming back. Oh, it will not be the all-enveloping arrangement of heavy folds, but will fall from a fitted yoke around the hips.

Already are very exclusive models being designed for soft silks that exemplify the idea yet are unobtrusive in the change of style.

You are not really surprised? The fullness at the hips has been so insistent that we must accept the change philosophically, remembering that it is the rule of fashionland.

CHAPTER I.

The Man With Wings.

For many hours—Cayley was too much of a god today to bother with the exact number of them—he had been flying slowly northward down a mild southerly breeze. Hundreds of feet below him was the dazzling, terrible expanse of the polar ice pack which shrouds the northern limits of the Arctic ocean in its impenetrable veil of mystery.

A compass, a sextant, a bottle of milk and a revolver comprised, with the clothes he wore, and with the shimmering silken wings of his aeroplane, his whole equipment. His nearest base of supplies, if you could call it that, was a 20-pound tin of pemmican, hidden under a stone on the north east extremity of Herald Island, 300 miles away. The United States rescue station at Point Barrow, the extreme northern point of Alaska, the place which he had called home for the past three months, was possibly, half as far again away, some-where off to the southeast.

But for these past weeks of unbroken arctic sunshine, he had fairly lived a-wing. The earth had no obstructions and the air no perils. Today, with his great broad fan-tail drawn up arc-wise beneath him, his planes pitched slightly forward, at the precise and perilous angle that only just did not send him plunging, head-first, down upon the sullen masses of ice below, he lay there, prone, upon the sheepskin sleeping bag which padded the frame-work supporting his two wings, as secure as the great fulmar petrel which drew curiously near, and then, with a wheel and a plunge, fed away, squawking.

For all practical purposes Cayley had learned to fly. The great fan-driven air ship, 100 feet from tip to tip, which had long lain idle on his ranch at Sandoval, would probably never leave its house again. It had done yeoman service. Without its powerful propellers, for the last resource, Cayley would never have been able to try the experiments and get the practise which had given him the air for his natural element. He had outgrown it. He had no more need of motors or whirling fans. The force of gravity, the force of the breeze and the perfectly co-ordinated muscles of his own body gave him all the power he needed now.

Perhaps the succeeding generations of humankind may develop an eye which can see ahead when the body is lying prone, as a bird lies in its flight. Cayley had remedied this deficiency with a little silver mirror, slightly concave, screwed fast to the crossbrace which supported his shoulders. Instead of bending back his head, or trying to see out through his eyebrows, he simply cast a backward glance into this mirror whenever he wanted to look on ahead. It had been a little perplexing at first, but he could see better in it now than with his unaided eyes.

And now, a minute or two, perhaps, after that fulmar had gone squawking away, he glanced down into his mirror, and his olympian calm was shaken by the shock of surprise. For what he saw, clearly reflected in his little reducing glass, was land. There was a mountain, and a long dark line that must be a cliff-like coast.

And it was land that never had been marked on any chart. In absolute degrees of latitude he was not, from the arctic explorer's view, very far north. Over on the other side of the world they run excursion steamers every summer nearer to the pole than he was at this moment. Spitzbergen, which has had a permanent population of 15,000 souls, lies 300 miles farther north than this uncharted coast which Philip Cayley saw before him.

But the great ice cap which covers the top of the world is irregular in shape, and just here, northward from Alaska, it juts its impenetrable barrier far down into the Arctic sea. Rogers, Collinson and the ill-fated De Long—they all had tried to penetrate this barrier, and had been turned back.

Cayley wheeled sharply up into the wind, and soared aloft to a height of, perhaps, a quarter of a mile. Then, with a long, flashing, shimmering sweep, he descended, in the arc of a great circle, and hung, poised, over the land itself and behind the jutting shoulder of the mountain.

The land was a narrow-necked peninsula. Mountain and cliff prevented him from seeing the immediate coast on the other side of it; but out a little way to sea he was amazed to discover open water, and the smoke-like vapor that he saw rising over the cliffhead made it evident that the opening extended nearly, if not quite, to the very land's edge. It was utterly unexpected, for the side of the peninsula which he had approached was ice-locked for miles.

He would have towered again above the rocky ridge which shut off his view, and gone to investigate this phenomenon at closer range, had he not, just then, got the shock of another surprise, greater than the discovery of land itself.

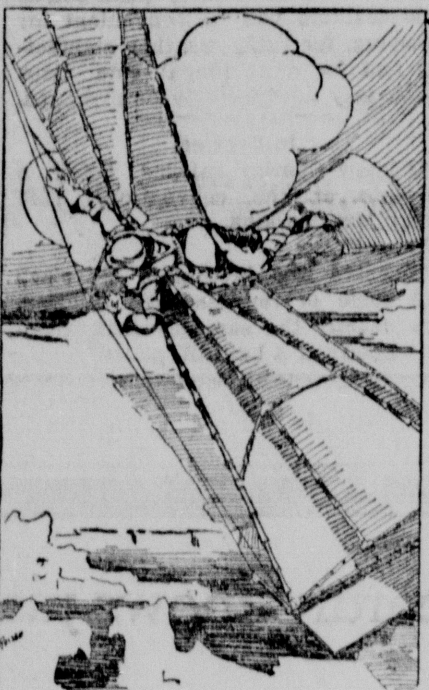

The little valley which he hung poised above was sheltered by a second ridge of rocky, ice-capped hills to the north, and, except for streaks, denoting crevices, here and there, was quite free from ice and snow. There were bright patches of green upon it, evidently some bit of flowering northern grass, and it was flecked here and there with bright bits of color, yellow poppy, he judged it to be, and saxifrage. Hugging the base of the mountain on the opposite side of the valley, then notching the cliff and grinding down to sea at the other side of it was a great white glacier, all the whiter, and colder, and more dazzling for its contrast with the brown mountain-side and the green-clad valley.

Up above the glacier, on the farther side, were great broad yellow patches, which he would have thought were poppy field, but for the impossibility of their growing in such a place. No vegetable growth was possible, he would have thought, against that clean-cut, almost vertical, rocky face. And yet, what else could have given it that blazing yellow color? Some day he was to learn the answer to that question.

But the thing that caught his eye now, that made him start and draw in a little involuntary gasp of wonder, was the sight of a little clump of black dots moving slowly, almost imperceptibly from this distance, across the face of the glacier. He blinked his eyes, as if he suspected them of playing him false. Unless they had played him false, these tiny dots were men.

All of the party, but one man, were dressed exactly alike, in hooded bearskin shirts and breeches, and boots of what he guessed was walrus hide. They moved along with the peculiar wary shuffle of men accustomed, by long habit, to the footing and to the heavy confining garb they wore. So far as he could see they were unarmed.

The other man was strikingly different. He appeared to be clad much as Cayley was himself, in leather, rather than in untanned hide. He seemed slighter, sprightlier, and in every way to convey the impression of having come more recently from the civilized, habitable portion of the world than his companions. He carried a rifle slung by a strap over his shoulder, evidently foreseeing no immediate use for it, and a flask.

Cayley Wheeled Sharply Up Into the Wind.

Cayley was too far aloft for their conversation to be audible to him, but he could hear that they were talking. The leather-clad man appeared to be doing the most of it, and, from the inflection of his voice, he seemed to be speaking in English.

Presently he noticed that the leather-clad man had forged a little ahead of his companions, or, rather—like a flash, this idea occurred to Cayley—that the others were purposely lagging a little behind.

And then, before that sinister idea could formulate itself into a definite suspicion, his eyes widened with amazement, and the cry he would have uttered died in his throat; for this man, who had so innocently allowed the others to fall behind him, suddenly staggered, clutched at something—it looked like a thin ivory dart—that had transfixed his throat, tugged it out in a sudden flood of crimson, reeled a little and then went backwards over the glassy edge of a fissure in the ice, which lay just to the left of the path where he had been walking.

From the instant when Cayley had noticed the others dropping behind, to the last glimpse he had of the body of the murdered man could hardly have been five seconds.

The instant the murdered man disappeared, another, who had not previously been with the party, it seemed, appeared from behind a hummock of ice. There could be no doubt either that he was the assassin, or that he was the commander of the little group of skin-clad figures that remained. The ambush appeared to have been perfectly deliberate. There had been no outcry, not even a gesture of surprise or of remonstrance.

Cayley looked at the assassin curiously. He was dressed exactly like the others, but seemed very much bigger; seemed to walk with less of a slouch, and had, even to Cayley's limited view of him, an air of authority. Cayley was surprised at his not being armed with a bow, for he knew of no other way in which a dart could have been propelled with power enough, even at close range, to have transfixed a man's throat. The assassin's only weapon, except for a quiverful of extra darts, seemed to be a short blunt stick, rudely whittled, perhaps ten inches long.

Obedient, apparently, to the order of the new arrival, the party changed its direction, leaving what was evidently a well-known path to them, for a seemingly more direct but rougher route. And they moved now with an appearance of haste. Presently they scrambled over a precipitous ledge of ice and, in a moment, were lost to Cayley's view.

The world was suddenly empty again, as if no living foot had ever trodden it; and Cayley, hovering there, a little above the level of the ice, rubbed his eyes and wondered whether the singular, silent tragedy he had just witnessed were real, or a trick the mysterious arctic light had played upon his tired eyes. But there remained upon that vacant scene two material reminders of the tragedy to which it had afforded a setting. One was smudge of crimson on the snow; the other, a little distance off, just this side of the icy ridge over which the last of the party had gone scrambling a moment before, was the strange looking blunt stick which he had seen in the assassin's hand.

Cayley flew a little lower, his wings almost skimming the ice. Finally, reaching the spot where the thing had fallen, he alighted and picked it up. Whether its possessor had valued it, or not, whether or not he might be expected to return for it, Cayley did not know, and did not much care.

He stood for some time turning the thing over in his hands, puzzling over it, trying to make out how it could have been used as the instrument of propulsion to that deadly ivory dart. There was a groove on one side of it, with a small ivory plug at the end. The other end was curiously shaped, misshapen, rather, for, though it was obviously the end one held, Cayley could not make it fit his hand, whatever position he held it in.

Giving up the problem at last, he tucked the stick into his belt, slipped his arm through the strap in the frame-work of his aeroplane and prepared for flight. He had a little difficulty getting up, owing to the absence of a breeze at this point. Finally he was obliged to climb, with a good deal of labor, the icy ridge up which he had watched the little party of murderers scrambling.

At the crest he cast a glance around, looking for them, but saw no signs of them. Then, getting a favorable slant of the wind, he mounted again into the element he now called his own.

Five years before Philip Cayley would have passed for a good example of that type of clean-limbed, clean-minded, likable young man which the best of our civilization seems to be flowering into. Physically, it would have been hard to suggest an improvement in him, he approached so near the ideal standards. He was fine grained, supple, slender, small-jointed, thoroughbred from head to heel.

Intellectually, he had been good enough to go through the academy at West Point with credit, and to graduate high enough in his class to be assigned to service in the cavalry. His standards of conduct, his ideas of honor and morality had been about the same as those of the best third of his classmates. If his fellow officers in the Philippines, during the year or two he spent in the service, had been asked to pick a flaw in him, which they would have been reluctant to do, they would have said that he seemed to them a bit too thin-skinned and rather fastidious; that was what his chum and only intimate friend, Perry Hunter, said about him at any rate.

But he could afford to be fastidious, for he had about all a man could want, one would think. For three generations they had taken wealth for granted in the Cayley family, and with it had come breeding, security of social position, simplicity and ease in making friends, both among men and women. In short, there could be no doubt at all that up to his twentieth year Fate had been ironically kind to Philip Cayley. She had given him no hint, no preparation for the stunning blow that was to fall upon him, suddenly, out of so clear a sky.

When it did fall, it cut his life clean across; so that when he thought back to that time now, it seemed to him that the Lieutenant Cayley of the United States army had died over there in the Philippines, and that he, the man who was now soaring in those great circles through the arctic sky, was a chance inheritor of his name and of his memory.

He had set out one day at the head of a small scouting party, the best-liked man in the regiment, secure in the respect, in the almost fatherly regard, of his colonel, proudly conscious of the almost idolatrous admiration of his men and the younger officers. He had gone out believing that no one ever had a truer friend than he possessed in Perry Hunter, his classmate at West Point, his fellow officer in the regiment, the confidant of all his hopes and ideals.

He had come back, after a fortnight's absence, to find his name smeared with disgrace, himself judged and condemned, unheard, in the opinion of the mess. And that was not the worst of it. The same blow which had deprived him of the regard of the only people in the world who mattered to him, destroyed, also, root and branch, his affection for the one man of whom he had made an intimate. The only feeling that it would be possible for him to entertain for Perry Hunter again must be a half-pitying, half-incredulous contempt. And if that was his feeling for the man he had trusted most and loved the most deeply, what must be for the rest of humankind? What did it matter what they thought of him or what they did to him? All he wanted of human society was to escape from it.

He fell to wondering, as he hung, suspended, over that rosy expanse of fleecy fog, whether, were the thing to do over again, he would act as he had acted five years ago; whether he would content himself with a single disdainful denial of the monstrous thing they charged him with; whether he would resign again, under fire, and go away, leaving his tarnished name for the daws to peck at.

Heretofore he had always answered that question with a fierce affirmative. Today it left him wondering. Had he stayed, had he paid the price that would have been necessary to clear himself, he would never have found his wings, so much was clear. He would never have spent those four years in the wilderness, working, experimenting, taking his life in his hands, day after day, while he mastered the art that no man had ever mastered before.

He had set himself this task because it was the only one he knew that did not involve contact with his fellow-beings. He must have something that he could work at alone. Work and solitude were two things that he had felt an overmastering craving for. And the possibility he had faced with a light heart every morning—the possibility of a sudden and violent death before night, had been no more to him than an agreeable spice to the day's work.

It was not until he had actually learned to fly, had literally shaken the dust of the earth from his feet and taken to the sky as his abode, that his wound had healed. The three months that he had spent in this upper arctic air, a-wing for 16 hours out of 24, had calmed him, put his nerves in tune again; given him for men and their affairs a quiet indifference, in place of the smarting contempt he had been hugging to his breast before. Three months ago, at sight of those little human dots crossing the glacier, he would have wheeled aloft and gone sailing away. Even a month ago he would hardly have hung, soaring there, above the fog, waiting for it to lift again the veil of mystery which it had drawn across the tragic scene he had just witnessed.

The month was August, and the long arctic day had already begun to know its diurnal twilight. A fortnight ago the sun had dipped, for the first time, below the horizon. By now there were four or five hours, out of every 25, that would pass for night.

The sun set while he hung there in the air, and as it did so, with a new slant of the breeze the fog rolled itself up into a great violet-colored cloud, leaving the earth, the ice, the sea unveiled below him. And there, in the open water of the little bay, he saw a ship, and on the shore a cluster of rude huts.

It struck him, even from the height at which he soared, that the ship, tied to an ice-ledge in the shelter of the great headland, did not look like a whaler, nor like the sort of craft which an arctic explorer would have selected for his purposes. It had more the trim smartness of a yacht.

They were probably all asleep down there, he reflected. It was nearly midnight and he saw no signs of life anywhere. He would drop down for a nearer look.

He descended, with a sudden hawk-like pounce, which was one of his more recent achievements in the navigation of the air, checked himself again at about the level of the mast-head, with a flashing forward swoop, like a man diving in shallow water; then, with a sudden effort, brought himself up standing, his planes nearly vertical, and, with a backward spring, alighted, clear of his wings, on the ice-ledge just opposite the ship.

As he did so, he heard a little surprised cry, half of fear, half of astonishment. It was a girl's voice.

MAY MASSACRE U. S. CITIZENS

Charges That Americans Insulted Nicaraguan Flag May Bring Tragedy.

RUSH 2,500 MARINES SOUTH

Government Working at Top Speed to Put Force in Republic to Stem Rebel Disputations—Sends Gunboat to Mexico.

Port Limon, Costa Rica, Aug. 24.—Additional bitterness has been injected into the civil war in Nicaragua by the report that Zelaya, the tyrant whom Diaz deposed, may return. Attacks on the "dollar diplomacy" of the United States and published charges that Americans have insulted the Nicaraguan flag seem likely to lead to wholesale massacres of Americans.

Rushing Marines into Nicaragua. Washington, Aug. 24.—The United States government is working at top speed to throw 2,500 marines into Nicaragua to give battle to the rebel forces under Generals Mena and Zeledon. General Mena has announced from his headquarters at Massaya, thirty miles from the Nicaraguan capital, that he would sack and destroy the port of Corinto under the guns of the American warship Annapolis and in the face of contrary orders from Captain Terhune of that vessel, who has left Managua hastily for the coast to take command of the marines against the rebels.

340 Men for Corinto. The war department ordered the California, en route from San Diego to Panama to disembark 340 marines at Corinto. This will give the United States 2,500 marines and bluejackets in Nicaragua, but if these should not prove sufficient the president will order some of the regular army to service in the southern republic. Atrocities perpetrated by Mena, including the massacre of 500 Nicaraguans at Leon, has caused gravest apprehension here for the safety of Americans in Nicaragua.

Managua, Corinto and Bluefields are threatened and the scout cruiser Prairie started today from Philadelphia with 750 marines for Nicaragua. The California should arrive Wednesday. The sacking of Corinto will cut off Managua from the coast and the war department is using all haste to get as large a body as possible of marines into the capital immediately.

U. S. Sends Gunboat to Mexico. To protect Americans and their property on the west coast of Mexico from the outlawry and brigandage of numerous bands of rebels, the government has dispatched the gunboat Vicksburg to Guaymas, Gulf of California, from San Diego. The situation in southeastern Mexico continues so unsettled and alarming that several small gunboats may be sent from West Indian waters to Vera Cruz and ports to the southward.

MAKE SENSATIONAL ARREST

Steamship Stopped in Mid-Ocean and Three Women Taken.

San Francisco, Aug. 24.—One of the most sensational arrests in the history of the local U. S. marshal's office was made when Deputy U. S. Marshals Burnham and Warner stopped the Pacific Mail steamship Manchuria as she passed the three-mile limit en route to China and took from the ship Mrs. Bernice Ward, a notorious prostitute, and Jane Kelly and Jennie Heath, two girls who were being taken to China for immoral purposes.

BILL VETOED TWICE A LAW

Taft Signs Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation Measure.

Washington, Aug. 24.—The president has signed the bill making appropriations for the legislative, executive and judicial branch of the government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913. This bill had twice been vetoed by the executive and was only accepted after the continuance of the commerce court had been provided for, though this provision is until March 4 of next year.

TO GET DOOMED MAN'S EYE

W. J. Abrahams, Blind, Asks for Novel Operation at Colorado Execution.

Denver, Colo., Aug. 24.—If the strange request of William J. Abrahams, a blind man of Denver, is granted he will see through the eyes of Lewis J. Wechter, condemned to die in the penitentiary at Canon City next week. Abrahams asks that the eyes of the condemned man be grafted in place of his own.

Mrs. White Sued for Dress Bill. Cleveland, O., Aug. 24.—Mrs. Marian Gilhooley White, wife of the head of the White Sewing Machine company, is named defendant in a suit filed in municipal court here by Haas Bros., New York tailoring concern, for dress bills totaling $720.

Operates on Himself; Dies. Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 24.—Jose Armandez, a Mexican, is dead as the result of having tried to relieve an attack of acute stomach trouble by performing an operation upon himself with a butcher knife.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so gives health and strength to the whole body.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

30,000 VOICES!

And Many Are The Voices of Dixon People

Thirty thousand voices — what a grand chorus! And that's the number of American men and women who are publicly praising Doan's Kidney Pills for relief from backache, kidney and bladder ills. They say it to friends. They tell it in the homes papers. Dixon people are in this chorus. Here's a Dixon case.

Mrs. Emile Bott, 811 College Ave Dixon, Ill., says, "We recommend Doan's Kidney Pills just as highly now as we did some years ago when we first gave a public statement in their praise. I was rheumatic and most of the pain was through my back and kidneys. At night I didn't sleep well and in the morning was all tired out. I was also nervous and dizzy and my kidneys were out of order. I tried different remedies but was not helped until I used Doan's Kidney Pills which I got at Leake Bros. Co.'s Drug Store. They made me strong and well."

For sale at all dealers. Price 50 cents Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

No one was seriously injured. The train carried nearly 300 passengers, many of whom had been attending the Soldiers and Sailors' reunion at Duquoin. The wreck was caused by tender of locomotive jumping the track.

Held for Passing Bad Coin.

Springfield, Aug. 24.—Unable to satisfactorily explain how he came into possession of a bad dollar, Thomas Wiley was arrested here on a charge of passing counterfeit money. The counterfeit coin was a part of the plunder taken from the safe of the Sangamon Ice Cream company when it was robbed recently. Wiley, who is a vendor of ice cream, makes his headquarters at the plant. It is charged that he passed the bad coin on Mrs. Mary Grigsby, a customer.

Returning home the three were put off the train at St. Francisville by the conductor for drinking on the train. They then started to walk to this city, a distance of ten miles. A tramp found the mangled remains of Walker on the Big Four right of way three miles south of this city.

MARRIAGE RITES IN ARMENIA.

Ancient and Odd Customs Are Still Commonly Observed in This Country.

Constantinople, Turkey.—Cupid has little chance in Armenia, where young women are closely secluded and kept away from all social intercourse with young men. From the time of her birth the life of the Armenian girl is regulated by her parents, even to the arrangements for her marriage and the choosing of a husband for her, and so closely is she watched that love affairs before marriage are unknown, and, indeed, as she is never allowed to see a man outside of her own family, there is little chance for Cupid to play any tricks on susceptible hearts.

As soon as a girl is born to them Armenian parents begin to lay aside money and fine linens for her marriage portion. When she is considered to have reached the marriageable age her mother sends a message to the guardians or parents of some young man who she thinks would be a suitable husband for her daughter, describing the girl's beauty, admirable qualities and particularly the amount of her dowry.

The marriage follows shortly, taking place at the home of the bride's parents, and the ceremony is as imposing as the ritual of the Greek church can make it. The bride, richly garbed in white silks and billows of lace, has quantities of jingling coins dangling from her braids, and both she and the bridegroom wear wreaths of artificial flowers. While the marriage rites are being solemnized the couple must stand or kneel before the priest for several hours with their foreheads pressed together. Meanwhile, drums, bells and other noisy instruments do all they can to detract from the solemnity of the occasion.

When the ceremony is concluded the female relatives of the bride rush to kiss the bridegroom, while they put into his pockets lumps of sugar and fasten ribbons upon his breast. The bride receives no attention whatever.

RURAL COP LIVES IN CLOVER

Getting the Market's Best, Awaiting Millionaire's Return to Collect Note.

Cleveland, Ohio.—Constable George Morris, monarch of all he surveys in the village of Nottingham, now lolling in the lap of luxury, is having the time of his life at the country mansion of Patrick Calhoun, multimillionaire traction magnate and real estate operator. Miss Martha Calhoun, heiress, has given the retinue of servants orders to serve Constable Morris' every wish.

Morris is at the mansion awaiting Calhoun's return from California to collect a judgment for $7,910, rendered by a California court.

"Now, nothing like that," Miss Calhoun had the servants give me some, you know," is the way Morris met the accusation that he went home for some pajamas.

"Eat? I've been eating like a house afire up here. Anything I want, you know. This morning I had ham and herring, demitasse, and, well, all the rest of the program. Haven't broken a plate yet. Nope, there's nothing doing on the 'wine and the red stuff.'" "Wouldn't be proper with Pat anyway. But I'm not embarrassed because he's gone."

Spices Are Use For Flavoring Foods

A Spice That Does Not Flavor is Worthless

The question is not how cheap is the price, but how strong is the spice. For example, 1 oz of Cinnamon at 10c will flavor 500 cinnamon rolls better than 5 pounds of worthless cinnamon bark at 15c per pound, because the cheap can never give the cinnamon flavor. If you want flavor buy the best it is the cheapest. If you do not want flavor, do not use any it is still cheaper. Do not take our word; try 10c worth of our best cinnamon or other spice and see the difference.

Buy best spices in tin only, it loses its strength in paste board. Buy small amounts, the fresher the stronger and the flavor is what you are buying. Again, they tell us that only spices (that is good spices) will digest, poor spices never.

Try our best spices and see if our spice men have given us the correct idea. It sounds right.
